Every year the Royal Welsh Agricultural Society holds a chainsaw logging and tree felling competition somewhere out in the woodlands of Wales.

The competition consists of 5 disciplines, that all relate to an operation performed by a forest worker during a normal working day:

- Fitting a new chain
- Accurately crosscutting a log that is either on the floor or is resting across another log
- Felling a tree in situ
- Limbing (removing branches)

This promotes precision chain saw use within the industry.

This year, at the Royal Welsh Showground, in the Forestry area, the RWAS, with the support of mwmac Ltd, is hosting the annual training/practice day, that precedes the competition, where competitors new and old can come together to practice and improve their skills.
